

```
select * from employees.employees e limit 10;
select * from employees.departments d limit 10;
```

```
Full Join - employees and departments [on department_id]
left join union right join -> see results and see total count -> 123 records (no duplicates)
This is full join which is left join union right join
```

```
select * from employees.employees e
left join employees.departments d
on e.department_id = d.department_id
union
select * from employees.employees e
right join employees.departments d
on e.department_id = d.department_id;
```

```
left join union all right join -> see results and see total count -> 229 records (contains duplicates)
```

```
select * from employees.employees e
left join employees.departments d -- horizontal
on e.department_id = d.department_id
union all -- vertical join
select * from employees.employees e
right join employees.departments d -- horizontal
on e.department_id = d.department_id;
```

```
select * from farmers_market.customer_purchases cp limit 10;
```

```
count the total number of customer_purchases on the table
```

```
select count(*), count(1), count(0), count('dhiraj'), count(cp.quantity), count(distinct cp.quantity) from farmers_market.customer_purchases cp;
```

```
select sum(cp.cost_to_customer_per_qty > 6.99) from farmers_market.customer_purchases cp limit 10;
```

```
select * from farmers_market.customer_purchases cp where cp.cost_to_customer_per_qty > 6.99; -- 1143 records
```

```
select product_id, vendor_id
from farmers_market.customer_purchases cp
group by product_id, vendor_id;
```

```
Aggregation function - Count
```

```
customer_purchases
```

```
Question: Count the number of purchases each customer made per market date.
```

```
select market_date, customer_id, count(*) as purchases
from farmers_market.customer_purchases cp
group by cp.market_date, cp.customer_id
order by purchases desc;
```

```
select market_date, customer_id, count(*) as purchases
from farmers_market.customer_purchases cp
group by cp.customer_id, cp.market_date
order by purchases desc;
```

```
Aggregation function - Sum the amount earned from purchases made per market date
-- I need to group by market date and sum up the amount per market date for getting the result select market_date, round(sum(quantity*cost_to_customer_per_qty),2) as amount from
farmers_market.customer_purchases cp
group by cp.market_date
order by amount desc;
select *, quantity*cost_to_customer_per_qty as amount from farmers_market.customer_purchases cp where market_date = '2019-12-18';
```

```
Question: Get a list of the customers who made purchases on each market date.
select * from farmers_market.vendor_inventory vi limit 10;
```

```
Having Clause: Question: filter out vendors who brought at # least 10 items to the farmer's market over the period - 2019-05-02 and 2019-05-16
purchases is an aggregated column
select vendor_id, count(*) as purchases from farmers_market.vendor_inventory vi where market_date between '2019-05-02' and '2019-05-16' -- this can be used on existing table columns group by vendor_id
having purchases > 10; -- can be used on aggregated columns not present in table
```